The Wilmington Hammerheads named Jason Arnold the new general manager of the professional soccer team, effective immediately, according to a recent news release.

Previously, Arnold served as executive director of USL Youth leagues while also serving as director of operations for United Soccer League (USL) and Major Indoor Soccer League (MISL).

As the Hammerhead's GM, Arnold will oversee all operations on the day-to-day level of the organization while continuing to work towards the development and success of the club as a whole, the release stated.

"It's an honor and a privilege to be named general manager of an organization with such a rich history as the Wilmington Hammerheads, and I am extremely excited to get started," Arnold said in the release. "The Hammerheads are an organization that I know very well and have had the opportunity to work with for many years during my time at the league office. I believe the opportunities for growth and community involvement in Wilmington are endless. The future is bright, and I look forward to bringing the team to the next level, both on and off the field."

Arnold was a three-time NCAA College Cup final four participant with the University of Maryland before getting a job with the USL in 2010.
